

How to Hike to the Cadini di Misurina Viewpoint: 4 Routes + Map

Blog > Europe > Italy > Dolomites

Cadini di Misurina is an awe-inspiring mountain group of the Sexten Dolomites in the Dolomites of Northern Italy.

Defined by sharp, slender spires and pinnacles, the jagged Cadini di Misurina mountains look like the imagined backdrop of a high fantasy epic.

The name “Cadini” refers to the many high valleys and cirques – called “cadin” or “ciadin” – that dissect the massive towers of the Cadini Group. “Misurina” refers to Lago di Misurina, the beautiful lake that lies at the southwestern foot of the Cadini di Misurina Mountains.

Though the Cadini di Misurina Peaks are striking from multiple angles (e.g. Lake Misurina, Lake Antorno, Val de le Cianpedele), there’s one vantage point that upstages all others. Nicknamed the Cadini di Misurina Viewpoint and sometimes referred to as the Towers of Mordor, the Cadini di Misurina Viewpoint brings you face-to-face with the northern side of the Cadini di Misurina Group.

From this perspective, the northern Cadini di Misurina pinnacles look like a stone forest of giant blades. It’s a dream location for photographers and anyone who loves the mountains.

How to Get Here: A Quick Summary

The fastest way to get to the Cadini Viewpoint is by driving, or taking the bus, to Rifugio Auronzo via the Rifugio Auronzo – Tre Cime di Lavaredo

From the Auronzo hut, it's a 35-minute walk to the famous Cadini viewpoint. This short out-and-back hike can easily be combined with the Tre Cime di Lavaredo Circuit trail in a single day.

Alternatively, you can skip the expensive toll road, and hike to the Cadini di Misurina viewpoint from Lago d'Antorno, an alpine lake located just south of the Auronzo – Tre Cime di Lavaredo toll gate.

Experienced hikers can also approach the Cadini di Misurina viewpoint from the south along the challenging Sentiero Alberto Bonacossa Trail.

We've described all these ascent routes below, starting with the fastest and easiest approach.

There are four possible routes to the Cadini di Misurina Viewpoint.

CADINI ASCENT ROUTES

Lago Antorno Route

Sentiero Bonacossa Route

1. Rifugio Auronzo Ascent Route. This is the most popular approach to the Cadini Photo Spot. Most people combine the Tre Cime di Lavaredo Circuit Trail with this short out-and-back hike. This easy trail is marked in red on the map.

2. Lago Antorno Ascent Route. This moderate hike is marked in green on the map. The benefit of starting at Lake Antorno, is that you don't have to pay the Tre Cime di Lavaredo/Rifugio Auronzo toll fee.

3. Sentiero Bonacossa Ascent Route. This challenging route, marked in gray, connects Rifugio Col de Varda with Rifugio Auronzo. It traverses the whole Cadini Group.

4. Sentiero Bonacossa North Circuit. This difficult ascent route starts at Lago Antorno, or Rifugio Auronzo. This is what we did. This loop trail is marked in red, yellow, and green.

The Cadini di Misurina mountains are located in the municipality of Auronzo di Cadore in the Italian province of Belluno in Veneto.

They form the southernmost mountain group of the Sesto/Sexten Dolomites, a sub-range of the Italian Dolomites in the Italian Alps.

The Sexten Dolomites extend into the Italian Province of South Tyrol. The Northern (South Tyrolean) Sexten Dolomites are protected within the UNESCO World Heritage Site of Tre Cime Nature Park.

Cadini di Misurina is bounded by the Misurina Lake to the west, the Lavaredo Group to the north, the Val Marzon and Vallone di Lavaredo valleys to the East, and the Ansiei valley to the South.

Neighboring ranges include the Cristallo-Popena Group (east), Sorapiss Group (south), and Lavaredo Group (north).

This is the fastest and easiest Cadini di Misurina hike.

Rifugio Auronzo Parking Lot

Rifugio Auronzo (2333 m) is a high-alpine refuge located at the southern foot of Tre Cime di Lavaredo (Drei Zinnen in German, Three Peaks in English).

In summer and early fall, you can drive all the way up to the hut via the Auronzo – Tre Cime di Lavaredo toll road.

There are also bus connections to the Auronzo hut from Lake Misurina, Cortina d'Ampezzo, and Dobbiaco/Toblach. If you're staying in South Tyrol (e.g. Dobbiaco, San Candido, Sesto), use the suedtirolmobil.info journey planner to look up bus schedules.

Toll Road Operating Times | The operating times change throughout the season. Email iat@comune.auronzo.bl.it for current times.

Payment | Cash or Credit Card

Cost | 30 EUR for cars, 20 EUR for motorcycles, 45 EUR for campervans/caravans

Parking | There are 700 parking spaces next to Rifugio Auronzo. The toll gate closes when the parking lot reaches full capacity.

Locate Trail 117

Rifugio Auronzo is situated along the famous Tre Cime di Lavaredo Circuit Trail.

Most people arriving at the Auronzo hut will be walking around Tre Cime di Lavaredo towards Rifugio Lavaredo and Rifugio Locatelli/Dreizinnenhütte (Trail 101), or towards Langalm (Trail 105), in the opposite direction of you.

From the Rifugio Auronzo parking lot, look south in the opposite direction of the Three Peaks.

You can already see the jagged Cadini di Misurina spires as well as Monte de le Cianpedele/Monte Campedelle, a mountain which looks insignificant by comparison. That's where you're headed.

The best way to locate trail 117 is by heading to Rifugio Auronzo.

From the mountain hut's outdoor terrace, walk down the paved steps along the road. Directly at the road, there's a trail sign guiding you south in the direction of Rifugio Fratelli Fonda Savio (Trail 117).

This clear path steers you away from the monumental Tre Cime di Lavaredo and towards Monte de le Cianpedele/Monte Campedelle (2346 m) and the razor-sharp Cadini peaks.

Follow Trail 117 to Forcella Longeres

Trail 117

Continue straight along trail 117, making a quick counter-ascent across the high plateau of Monte de le Cianpedele/Monte Campedelle.

Three Peaks

To the east (looking left), you'll see the deep Vallone di Lavaredo – Valle Marzon valleys and several prominent peaks of the Sesto/Sexten Dolomites.

Looking behind you, the views of the Three Peaks get better and better.

Trail 117 Divide 1 – Bear Right

Approaching the first trail divide

After ascending for a few minutes, the path divides. Ignore the left trail. It's dangerous, because the ledge path is eroding and in poor condition.

We took this precarious path, not knowing that it's actually fenced off on the other side.

First divide – left trail (don't hike here)

Bear right instead, following the official trail, which is waymarked with mini poles.

When the trail divides again, about 10 minutes later, you can now follow the well-established left footpath, which skirts the summit of Monte de le Cianpedele/Monte Campedelle. This ledge path is very narrow, but stable.

Note: you will not see this trail delineated on most paper trail maps.

Alternatively, you can continue on the right trail to the viewpoint. This is the better option if you have any fear of heights, or if the trail is wet and slippery. This trail is marked on all paper trail maps.

We opted for the left path.

Left Trail

As you follow the left path, the views of the Cadini di Misurina mountains mesmerize and it's all too easy to lose track of time.

You'll see a dramatic procession of razor-sharp peaks: Cimon di Croda Lissa, Cima Cadin Nord Est, Cima Cadini di San Lucano, Cima Eotvos, Cima Cadini della Neve, and Cima Cadini di Misurina.

The Famous Cadini di Misurina Viewpoint

Soon, you'll see the famous Cadini di Misurina viewpoint, which is a grassy ridge sloping upwards and projecting triumphantly towards the Cadini pinnacles. It looks like a small ski jump.

Trail 117 continues steadily towards this impressive viewpoint, crowned by dwarf pine.

Cadini di Misurina Viewpoints

Approximately 150 meters before you reach the conspicuous viewpoint, the left and right paths merge and then split once again.

The lower track follows the ledge and leads to the celebrated Cadini di Misurina viewpoint. The narrow path to the “ski jump” viewpoint branches

Upper Track Viewpoint

The upper track leads to a panoramic plateau with several other great Cadini di Misurina photo spots, a worthy detour.

Val Marzon

From this higher-elevation vantage point, there are more excellent views of Cadini di Misurina as well as Tre Cime di Lavaredo (to the south), Val Marzon and Croda dei Toni/Zwölferkofel (to the east), the Cristallo Group, Croda Rossa d'Ampezzo/Hohe Gaisl, and Picco di Vallandro/Dürrenstein (to the west).

Tre Cime di Lavaredo (south face) at sunset

Return to Rifugio Auronzo

This marks the end of the Cadini viewpoint hike. To return to Rifugio Auronzo, follow the same trail back.

Or, Extend Your Hike to Rifugio Fonda Savio

From afar, the Cadini mountains seem impenetrable. However, these seemingly intimidating mountains are furrowed with multiple excellent hiking trails.

This famous protected route connects Rifugio Auronzo with Rifugio Fonda Savio and Rifugio Col de Varda.

If you're an experienced alpine hiker, you can continue south along trail 117 to Rifugio Fonda Savio. That's what we did and it was unforgettable.

2. Lake Antorno to the Cadini di Misurina Viewpoint (Moderate)

This is a moderate day hike perfect for anyone who wants to skip the expensive toll road.

Trailhead | Lake Antorno Car Park | Google Maps

Distance | 9.7 km out-and-back

Time Needed | 3:40 hours

Elevation Gain/Loss | 485 meters

Difficulty | Moderate

Minimum Elevation | 1856 meters

Maximum Elevation: 2341 meters

Get to Lago d'Antorno

Lake Antorno

Lake Antorno (1890 m) is located along the Tre Cime di Lavaredo Panoramic Road, north of Lake Misurina, and just 650 meters south of the toll gate.

There's a free car park next to Chalet Lago Antorno. There are also a few free parking spaces directly at the toll gate. However, these spots fill up quickly.

~~FOLLOW THE TRAIL ALONG LAGO DI AURONZO. AT THE NORTHEAST END OF THE LAKE, LEAVE THE LAKE PATH AND CONTINUE NORTH TOWARDS TRE CIME DI LAVAREDO.~~

Parallel to the main road, follow a soft forest path to the Misurina Casello signed intersection, which is just below the Rifugio Auronzo/Tre Cime toll gate.

Follow Trail 101 in the direction of Rifugio Auronzo

Trail 101

At the intersection, head right, away from the road, and follow trail 101 in the direction of Rifugio Auronzo.

Continue left over the creek in the direction of Rifugio Auronzo. After passing a large meadow, ringed by larch, the trail begins to gradually ascend.

Trail 101 progresses uphill through a larch forest on an enjoyable, undulating path.

After you clear the timberline, the path levels out and you'll cut across the rocky western slopes of Col de le Bisse.

Rifugio Auronzo is already visible ahead.

The trail descends a few meters to the valley floor of Val del Ciadin de Longares, where there's a trail juncture.

Here, you can hike to Rifugio Auronzo first (following trail 101) or take the more direct trail to the Cadini di Misurina Viewpoint via Forcella Longeres saddle.

Ascend to Forcella Longeres

For the direct route, head right in the direction of Forcella Longeres and trail 117.

It's a 1 km (210 meter elevation gain) ascent to the Longeres saddle. The path climbs up the Ciadin de Longeres Valley/Cirque and crests at the Forcella Longeres saddle.

Viewpoints

From the saddle, continue right (south) and follow trail 117 to the Cadini Viewpoint (30 minutes).

After ascending for a few minutes, the path divides. Ignore the left footpath and follow the waymarks along the right path.

When the trail divides once again you can choose between the narrow, left path (more scenic), which skirts the summit of Monte de le Cianpedele/Monte Campedelle, or the easier right path.

After 10 minutes, the paths merge. From here, the paths split once again. The lower track (trail 117/Sentiero Bonacossa) leads to the “ski jump” viewpoint, the famous Cadini di Misurina photo motif.

Return to Lake Antorno

To complete this Cadini hiking trail, you can return to Lake Antorno along the same trail you ascended.

Another option is to detour to Rifugio Auronzo (for lunch) and then descend to the lake along trail 101. Note: this trail crosses the toll road twice.

Alternatively, you can follow the thrilling Sentiero Bonacossa Trail (experienced hikers only) through the Cadini Mountains to Rifugio Fonda Savio, and then descend 1:30 hours to Lake Antorno.

3. Sentiero Bonacossa Trail to the Cadini di Misurina Viewpoint (Difficult)

This is the most strenuous approach to the Cadini di Misurina photo spot.

Starting Point | Col de Varda chairlift car park at Lake Misurina |
Google Maps

Trailhead | Rifugio Col de Varda, easily reached with the Misurina-Col de Varda chairlift

Ending Point | Rifugio Auronzo

Distance | 7.2 km point-to-point

Time Needed | 4 hours

Elevation Gain | 1020 meters

Elevation Loss | 816 meters

Minimum Elevation | 2108 meters

Maximum Elevation | 2495 meters

Trail | 117

The most exciting, albeit strenuous, approach to the Cadini Viewpoint is from the south, along the Sentiero Bonacossa Trail.

This route is something between an easy via ferrata and a difficult hiking trail. All exposed sections are secured with cables. Though a full via ferrata kit isn't necessary, we highly recommend wearing a climbing helmet and climbing gloves.

The path bisects the range, starting at Rifugio Col de Varda (2106 m), which is accessible by chairlift from Lake Misurina.

The trail leads north to Rifugio Fonda Savio (2367 m) and then eventually up to Rifugio Auronzo.

Regional buses usually operate from mid-June until early-October. We've outlined the bus connections between Cortina, Dobbiaco/Toblach, Misurina and the Auronzo hut in our Rifugio Auronzo Toll Road guide.

Alternatively, you can hike the Sentiero Bonacossa South Route (Rifugio Col de Varda with Rifugio Fonda Savio) or the Sentiero Bonacossa North Route (Rifugio Fonda Savio to Rifugio Auronzo) as circuit trails. This is the best option if the Misurina-Col de Varda chairlift and regional buses are no longer operating.

Note: only the northern circuit takes you to the Cadini di Misurina Viewpoint.

More info below.

4. Sentiero Bonacossa North Trail Circuit – What We Did (Difficult)

This circuit route to the Cadini di Misurina viewpoint follows the northern Sentiero Bonacossa Trail.

Trailhead | Rifugio Auronzo or Lago Antorno

Distance | 12.5 km circuit

Time Needed | 6 hours

Maximum Elevation | 2346 meters

Trails | 117, 115, 101

It's possible to start the Sentiero Bonacossa North Circuit at either Rifugio Auronzo or Lago d'Antorno.

Starting at the Auronzo hut, you'll follow Trail 117 to the Cadini di Misurina Viewpoint (as described earlier in this post) and then continue along 117 through the Cadini Mountains to Rifugio Fonda Savio.

Learn more about this fantastic trail in our in-depth Sentiero Bonacossa North Trail Guide.

Important | We started this route at Rifugio Auronzo and hiked the Sentiero Bonacossa north-to-south, because we wanted to return to the Cadini di Misurina viewpoint for sunset, after completing the hike.

Unless you want to experience sunset at the viewpoint, definitely start the hike at Lago d'Antorno. The main reason is that it's safer and easier to hike the Sentiero Bonacossa trail south-to-north.

Another compelling reason is that it will save you money. By starting at the lake, you won't have to pay the expensive Tre Cime di Lavaredo-Rifugio Auronzo toll.

Cadini di Misurina Photo Spots

The Cadini di Misurina “ski jump” viewpoint is a popular photo motif, which means you’ll likely encounter a line-up of tripods and a handful of drones during your visit, especially around sunset.

Luckily, there is more than enough room for everyone and multiple photo spots to explore.

In addition to the celebrated Cadini photo spot (which we’re calling the “ski jump”), there are many amazing photo opportunities along the approaching trail and atop the plateau.

Tre Cime loop or Cadini di Misurina?

We are not very fit and I don't think we can do them both in one day.

Hi Brian,

I would hike the Tre Cime Circuit, though it's significantly longer than the Cadini viewpoint hike. You'll see the Cadini di Misurina mountains from the Tre Cime loop trail.

We will be headed to the Dolomites at the end of May/early June.

We will primarily be hiking in Val di Funes and Val Gardena, but are considering a day trip to either Prato Piazza or this area. If the toll road is open, would this hike be manageable at that time of year? I noticed that you specifically state it's best to hike starting late June.

Hi Erika,

I recommend reaching out to the tourist office in Sexten. They will know best about current conditions.

Safe travels,
