

Hiking the Seceda – Rifugio Firenze Circuit Trail, Dolomites

Blog > Europe > Italy > Dolomites

Seceda is a mountain in the Odle/Geisler Group situated within Puez-Odle Nature Park in South Tyrol in Northern Italy.

The Seceda summit (2519 meters) is a must-see destination in the Dolomites, because of its unbeatable view of the Fermeda Peaks. Atop Mount Seceda, the Fermeda towers look like a Swiss army knife, eternally destined to slash the sky.

We've visited Seceda six times in June, July, August, September, October, and December.

The easiest and fastest way to get to Seceda is to ascend with the Ortisei-Funes-Seceda Cableways from Ortisei in Val Gardena. During the summer season, the Seceda cableways usually operate between end of May and early November.

From the Seceda cableway mountain station, it's a mere 10-minute walk to the summit lookout point. From the summit, the hike continues along the Seceda ridge towards the jagged Odle Peaks.

The spectacular Seceda ridge is just the beginning of a highly-satiating circuit trail that links Pieralongia, Rifugio Firenze (Regensburger Hütte in German), and Baita Troier. Below, you'll find a complete description of this Seceda – Rifugio Firenze circuit route.

Camping | Seceda is located within Puez-Odle Nature Park, a protected UNESCO World Heritage Site. Please note that wild camping is strictly forbidden along the Seceda Ridge and in Puez-Odle Nature Park. If you want to visit Seceda at sunrise, or sunset, stay in the mountainside Almhotel Col Raiser or Rifugio Fermeda.

How to Get to Seceda in the Dolomites

Step 1: Head to the Seceda Cableway Valley Station in Ortisei, Val Gardena

Walking Directions

If you're arriving in Ortisei/St. Ulrich by bus, get off at Piazza S. Antonio/Antoniusplatz in the village center.

It takes about 5 minutes to walk from the center of Ortisei to the Seceda cableway, using the La Curta pedestrian connection.

From Antonio Square, look for a sign to "Seceda." Head down the small street between Sparkasse Ortisei Bank and Calzature Rabanser Di Senoner Emilia shoe store.

Take the covered "La Curta" escalator up. After the escalator, locate the pedestrian tunnel straight ahead with a conveyor belt walkway.

Driving and Parking Directions

It is possible, though not recommended, to drive to the Seceda cableway valley station, which is located on Via Val d'Anna 2, I-39046 Ortisei, Val Gardena, South Tyrol. Exact Location: Google Maps.

There's a paid parking garage and outdoor parking area directly at the valley station with a capacity of 250 spaces. During our last visit, the parking was 2.50 EUR/hour between 7 am and 7 pm and .80 EUR/hour between 7 pm and 7 am.

If you're staying in Ortisei, do not drive to the valley station. Most accommodations are within walking distance to the cableway.

If you're staying in any other area of Val Gardena, either take a bus to Ortisei, or start this hike at the Col Raiser Gondola mountain station.

Step 2: Purchase a Round-Trip Ticket to Seceda

To get to Seceda, you have to take the Ortisei-Furnes gondola followed by the Furnes-Seceda cable car.

When you purchase your cableway ticket, you'll be asked whether you want to go to Furnes (middle station) or Seceda (top station). Purchase a round-trip ticket to Seceda.

this Seceda – Monte Pic ascent route.

Step 3: Ascend to the Seceda Mountain Station (2 Cableways)

Hop on the Ortisei-Furnes gondola to the Furnes middle station.

At Furnes, disembark the gondola and walk a few meters to the Furnes-Seceda cableway station. Hop on the Furnes-Seceda aerial cable car to the Seceda mountain station.

Hold onto your tickets. You will need to scan them again on the return ride back to Ortisei.

Seceda Hiking Trail Description

Seceda Mountain Station to Seceda Summit / Photo Spot (10 minutes)

When you disembark the Seceda cableway mountain station, you will immediately see the slanted and formidable Odle/Geisler peaks.

The panoramic view extends to the Puez Group, including Piz Duleda (2909 m), Col dala Pieres (2747 m), and Monte de Stevia (2500 m), as well as the Sella Group and Sassolungo Group.

Follow the sign to the Seceda summit and photo spot.

It takes about 10 minutes to reach Mount Seceda (2518 meters). The summit is crowned with a Gipfelkreuz (summit cross) and a circular, metal structure indicating the names and elevations of prominent peaks in the Italian Alps and Austrian Alps, which are visible from this vantage point.

Looking to the left of the vicious Seceda ridgeline, you can see the summits of Medalges (2454 m), Sobutsch (2486 m), and Sass de Putia/Peitlerkofel (2,875 m), the northernmost mountain in the Puez-Odle Dolomites.

For context, the trail directly to the north of Seceda, at the base of the Odle/Geisler mountains, is the famous Adolf Munkel Trail.

Near the summit, a narrow, semi-exposed path leads to another interesting viewpoint, located at a slightly lower elevation.

Hiking here is completely optional. Only hike to this Seceda photo spot if you have no fear of heights and the conditions are dry.

Seceda Summit to Pieralongia (40 minutes)

The trail continues along the Seceda ridge in the direction of the Fermeda peaks: Pitla Fermeda, Grana Fermeda, and Gran Odla.

The entire path is embedded with cement blocks and lined with fences on both sides. The path is reinforced in order to thwart erosion and for safety, as it's easier to grip cement than wet and muddy grass.

Please do not bypass the fences for photos.

The ridge footpath descends and joins trail 6. The path levels out and turns to gravel as you near the Panascharte saddle.

Continue along trail 6 across the grassy Seceda Alp to Forcella Pana (Furcella de Pana in Ladin, Panascharte in German), a dizzying, narrow saddle located at 2439 meters.

The Pana saddle links Val di Funes with Val Gardena, but it's currently closed due to a rockfall. For the purpose of this hike, you can safely ignore of the Troier Hut, signed “Troier Hütte – Baita Trojer.”

As you contour down the Alp, an impressive mountain panorama stretches out before you.

Alpe di Siusi is the rolling plateau to the southwest that stretches between the mighty Sassolungo/Langkofel Group and the Sciliar/Schlern Group. The Sella Group is the colosseum-shaped massif that stands to the southeast of Selva Val Gardena.

The forested, somewhat insignificant looking hill ahead is Monte Pic, one of the best sunset photography spots in the Dolomites.

At the junction, turn left in the direction of Rifugio Firenze (Utia de Ncisles in Ladin and Regensburgerhütte in German), signed 1 hour.

This enchanting trail, flanked by a wooden railing, leads east towards Monte Stevia. You'll pass a few picture-perfect hay huts along the way to the next junction.

At the next junction, turn left onto trail 2B in the direction of Pieralongia Hütte, signed 30 minutes.

This stretch of the Seceda hike traverses a mountain pasture, which is grazed in summer. Keep a respectful distance from the animals and do not in any way disturb them.

Beneath the slanted Fermeda peaks, the trail maintains the same easterly direction. Enjoy the views of the green-velvety landscape, speckled with huts and tarns.

At the Pieralongia mountain pasture, you'll find a rustic mountain hut, situated amid dolomite boulders. This managed hut serves light snacks and refreshments.

Just beyond the hut, there are twin spires, thrusting in opposite directions.

Pieralongia actually means “long rock” in Ladin.

Pieralongia to Rifugio Firenze/Regensburger Hütte (40 minutes)

Pass the rustic Pieralongia hut and continue straight on 2B for another 15 minutes (750 meters).

Beneath the Fermeda towers, the trail effortlessly cuts across boulder-studded meadows towards Mont de Stevia.

The trail descends to a signed junction. Maintain the same direction, following the sign to Rifugio Firenze.

At the next intersection, turn right onto trail 13B to Rifugio Firenze, signed 30 minutes.

After about 10 minutes, continue descending on the well-groomed trail 13. The path crosses wide-open meadows, peppered with Swiss Pine, all the way down to the Firenze mountain hut (20 minutes).

In summer, Haflinger horses and cows wander about freely.

Located beneath the imposing wall of Mount Stevia, Rifugio Firenze (Regensburger Hütte in German, Utia de Ncisles) enjoys a dramatic setting at the edge of Puez-Odle Nature Park at 2040 meters.

Regensburger Hütte was built in 1888 and was one of the first mountain huts in Val Gardena.

It was originally managed by the German-Austrian Alpine Club (DÖAV). However, after the First World War and the annexation of South Tyrol, the administration of the refuge was transferred to the Italian Alpine Club (CAI). In 2010, the hut was entrusted to the Autonomous Province of Bolzano (South Tyrol), which still owns it.

The hut terrace takes in the full sweep of the Odle Group along with the Sassolungo Group. You can eat lunch in Rifugio Firenze anytime between 11:30 am until 3 pm.

Rifugio Firenze/Regensburger Hütte to Baita Troier (50 minutes)

Rifugio Firenze

To complete the Seceda circuit trail, follow trail 1 in the direction of Trojer Hütte / Baita Troier (also spelled Troier) and Seceda, signed 50 minutes and 1:30 hours respectively. This part of the hike is almost continuously uphill.

The gravel path soon divides. Stay right.

Ascend the smooth, well-graded trail through stands of Swiss Pine.

The path steeply climbs up to the UNESCO Mastlé Val Gardena Panoramic Balcony, which is a circular steel structure that serves as a viewing platform. The structure illustrates the names and corresponding directions of the surrounding peaks.

The main focal point is Sassolungo, but there are also arresting views of Piz Duleda and Monte Stevia.

From the UNESCO viewpoint, continue up to the fence that runs along the ridge. From here, the gravel path descends with great ease across a wide-open meadow.

Shortly after passing the small lake of Lech da Iman, you'll arrive at Baita Troier, an alpine pasture hut with a small enclosure of farm animals.

If you already ate lunch at Rifugio Firenze, we recommend eating dessert here. We ordered their mouthwatering Buchtein.

Baita Troier to Seceda Mountain Station (30-40 minutes)

Continue ascending along trail 1 back to the Seceda mountain station.

The trail leads steadily uphill along a cement-block path.

At the next junction, continue on the lower path to Seceda. There's no need to hike all the way back up to the Panascharte saddle. The smooth, mostly trail crosses the grassy slopes and steers you all the way back to the cableway mountain station (20 minutes).

Seceda - Rifugio Firenze Circuit Hike Difficulty

This is an easy-moderate day hike. The difficulty will depend on how acclimated you are to higher elevations, the weather conditions, and your hiking experience.

station might come as a surprise.

After rain, or snow, the terrain can get very slippery. Though hiking poles are not a necessity, they will help stabilize you, if you're hiking in mud.

When to Hike

It's possible to visit Seceda from late May until early November.

The best time to hike to Seceda is between June and mid/late October, when the trail is usually clear of snow.

You can monitor the conditions atop Seceda by looking at this Seceda webcam.

May

If you're visiting the Dolomites in May, before the Seceda cableways are operating, you can hike up to Seceda from Val Gardena.

We recommend starting the hike at the Praplan car park above Santa Cristina. Follow this Monte Pic and Seceda trail guide.

If you're attempting this hike in early-mid May, please ask the Val Gardena tourist office about current trail conditions. If there's a lot of snow, it may not be safe.

June – October

The Seceda cableways operate between late May and early November.

The operating hours are between 8:30 am and 6 pm. See exact dates.

December – April

Seceda and it was incredible.

From the summit, you can ski down to Ortisei via the Val d'Ana ski slope, or Santa Cristina.

If you're based in Ortisei, you will ascend to Seceda via the Ortisei-Furnes gondola followed by the Furnes-Seceda cableway (as you would if you were hiking).

If you're based in Santa Cristina, find your way to the Saslong valley station. Santa Cristina hotels like Dorfhotel Beludei and Hotel Touring operate private ski shuttles that will drop you off here. When you arrive at Saslong, locate the Gardena Ronda Express. This underground train connects Saslong (the Ciampinoi ski area) with the Col Raiser gondola station (Seceda ski area).

From the Col Raiser gondola mountain station, take the easy blue run to the Fermeda chairlift. The chairlift delivers you to the Seceda ridge.

98% of Seceda winter visitors are skiers, or snowboarders. However, it's also possible to ride the Ortisei-Furnes-Seceda cableways and hike 10 minutes up to the Seceda summit viewpoint to take in the views, even if you're not skiing.

Alternative Hikes to Seceda

Col Raiser Gondola | You can also hike to Seceda from the Col Raiser Gondola mountain station. The valley station is located in Santa Cristina, so this is the best option for hikers based in the Val Gardena villages of Selva, or Santa Cristina. Another compelling reason to start at Col Raiser is that the Col Raiser gondola is cheaper than the Ortisei-Furnes-Seceda cableways. If you're trying to decide where to start, consider that if you start and end at Seceda, you will have two opportunities to see the ridge. The lighting will be different and the conditions may be different as well.

Cristauta – Praplan | If you want to hike to Seceda without a cableway, drive to the Cristauta – Praplan car park above Santa Cristina. We recommend hiking to the summit via Baita Gamsblut, Rifugio Fermenda, and Baita Daniel. After hiking the Seceda Ridge, descend to Baita Troier and then continue in the direction of Baita Curona. Ascend to Monte Pic and hike back to the car park via Baita Seurasas. For a complete trail description, read our Monte Pic – Seceda trail guide.

Munkel Trail and then cross the Odle Group via the scree-filled Mittagsscharte. After a rugged descent to a grazing area, the path continues with ease to Pieralongia and then up to Seceda. Read our Resciesa – Seceda hiking guide.

Via Ferrata Option | And finally, if you want to combine a visit to Seceda with an intermediate via ferrata, check out our guide to Via Ferrata Sass Rigais.

Hi Rex,

Another possible ascent is with the Col Raiser Gondola in Selva di Val Gardena. But, I believe that closes in mid-October. It's possible to follow a trail under the gondola to the top station. From there, take trail no2 to the Seceda ridgeline.

Good luck!

i'm planning to visit Fermena Peak in 2nd November, is it possible for hiking and how long from the parking station to that spot round trip?

Me and my brother really wanna see that stunning scenery. Can you suggest accommodation as well ?

Hi Bovi,

If you're walking from the bottom of the Col Raiser Station, it'll probably take around 3 hours to ascend to Seceda (~6 km one-way / 950 m ascending).

Hi Sabrina!

I just want to thank you for such clear directions, but after doing the hike this week, I was taken back of the difficulty of the hike. I'm glad the rest of my family did not want to go and instead had a rest day in Bolzano because I had a difficult time on the hike. I'm not a novice and in decent physical shape, but it was definitely not an easy hike. I would say intermediate; especially for those not used to hiking in the Alps. Based off your difficulty stated as easy, I assumed I would be able to take my family on this hike as novices. They would not have made it through, especially the ascent from Regenhutte back to the gondola. The trails are easy to follow and the paths are well maintained, but the physical difficulty, if you're not used to hiking, was at least intermediate.

2 questions:

1. I will have my wife and my 6yrs old son with me, because there is no cable car, where is the last parking spot I can find before hiking ? Any chance to drive up to a rifugio or hut ?
2. Which hiking route is with best view for photos ? I am a photographer.

Hi Gordon,

If there's a lot of snow, it's probably not advisable to hike to Seceda in late November.

We hiked to Seceda without a cable car from Cristauta/Praplan Parking Lot above Santa Cristina. Read this post: Seceda and Monte Pic day hike. Otherwise, some people hike from the Col Raiser gondola valley station.

Good Luck,

I have been researching the Seceda Ridgeline area for an adult family hike. Most of the information suggests taking the cable and gondola to Seceda and proceed from there to Rifugio Firenze where we plan to overnight. One article I read claimed that the Sededa route from Ortisei was not very scenic. He preferred leaving Cristina and taking the cable up to Col Raiser and hike from there. Can you help me decide?

ReplymoonhoneytravelFebruary 18, 2022 at 12:07 pm

Hi Jane,

The hike from Seceda to Rifugio Firenze via Pieralongia Alm is very scenic. However, it's only 1:20 hours (4.4 km one-way), which is quite short. I would expand on the hike. For example, you could hike to Rifugio Firenze and then summit Col da la Pieres, before ending your day at the hut.

All the best,

Sabrina

Hello Sabrina,

Love your website so much! Thank you for all the details just a question to ask as it seems that the hike back from the Rifugio to the mountain station seems to be a bit tough – how long will the hike be if we finished at Pieralongia and return the same way we came?

moonhoneytravelJune 4, 2022 at 6:33 pm

Hi Peijet,

Thank you!!!

The hike from Rifugio Firenze to Seceda is neither technical, nor difficult, but is it uphill (500 meters). I would encourage you to do it (with breaks), unless that sounds like too much. The hike from Seceda to Pieralongia is probably 40 minutes one-way (2.1 km one-way), so only 1:20 hrs total.

Another wonderful recommendation from you wonderful ladies. We did this yesterday and it was amazing. 360 views like Tre Cime the whole time! This was definitely the hardest hike we did because of the long ascent at the end. If you don't normally hike, it will be crazy difficult for you. But otherwise just take your time, stop at the huts and enjoy the views. Or consider taking the fermeda chair lift back up to Seceda if you don't want to do the climb.

shorter and easier) Distance? Uphill elevation? Then take Col Raiser Cableway back down. Can we get a bus to take us back to Seceda cableway to our parked car in the 3rd week of June?

Hi Scott,

If you hike Seceda-Pieralongia Alm-Rifugio Firenze-Col Raiser mountain station, it would be 1:45 – 2 hours, 5.6 km point-to-point, and 430 meters descending/62 meters ascending.

From col raiser valley station, you can take a bus to Santa Cristina and Ortisei (perhaps 2 buses in total). It's possible, yes.

Hi Arzu,

Please read How to Get to the Dolomites.

There are direct buses from Bolzano to Ortisei, Val Gardena.

Best,

Sabrina

Hi. Thank you for all of the clear and detailed information. I'm wondering if this hike can be modified to Pieralongia – the UNESCO Dolomites panoramic balcony – Rifugio Firenze – Baita Odles Seggiovia Fermeda Lift. And whether it's recommended?

Hi,

We recommend following the route as described. But, it's always possible to modify the route as needed.

Kindly,

Sabrina

Hi Sabrina,

You'd asked me to let you (in an email) know what our favorite hike in the greater area was, and this was it—both for views and that we had semi-sunny weather for the morning (it rained quite a bit during the 3 weeks we were in Ortisei). Unfortunately, we couldn't (well, wouldn't) do many of your more ambitious hikes due to poor weather, and because we're in our 70s and my partner's conditioning nixed the hard stuff (which would have taken a lot longer for her than it would have for me). We did modify your route somewhat to make this hike a bit longer and meandering. We found the hike pretty easy, though perhaps all our sightseeing stops contributed to that.

compass, educated us nicely. I highly recommend that hike for its overview and introduction to trail steepness generally not found in the U.S.

Hi Gary,

Thank you for reaching out! I'm sorry the weather was disappointing. With the multiple snow storms and the rain, this September was very unusual.

I hope you still enjoyed your trip. Very glad you liked Monte Pic!

All the best,

Sabrina

Hi

We are planning a visit to the Dolomites mid April and wanted to experience the Secada and were hoping that we could use a cable

Thankyou

Julie

Hi Julie,

The Val Gardena ski season is projected to run until April 5, 2025. If you visit when the ski resort is open, you can ride the cableways to Seceda and carefully walk to the viewpoint. Later in the month, when the cableways are closed, the only way to reach Seceda is by hiking from Cristauta / Praplan Car Park above Santa Cristina. However, it's usually not advisable to hike here in April due to the lingering snow. If possible, postpone your trip until end of May (earliest), or visit earlier for the ski season. Read Best Time to Visit the Dolomites for a complete overview of what each month is like.

Kindly,

Sabrina
