

Hiking from Resciesa to Rifugio Brogles and Seceda in the Italian Dolomites

Blog > Europe

Q ≡

The hike across the Resciesa/Raschötz alpine plateau to Brogleshütte/Rifugio Brogles and over Furcela de Mesdi/Mittagsscharte (2597 m) to Seceda is a spectacular introduction to hiking in Puez-Odle Nature Park in the Italian Dolomites.

You'll start this day hike in Ortisei in Val Gardena, ascending to Resciesa plateau via the Resciesa Funicular.

And, you'll either end this hike by descending to Ortisei via the Seceda-Furnes-Ortisei cableways, or by descending to Selva di Val Gardena via the Col Raiser gondola.

This is easily one of the best hikes from Ortisei because you get to see the Odle/Geisler peaks from multiple angles and visit one of the most charming huts in Val di Funes.

Also, this is an exciting way to experience the Seceda Ridgeline. Instead of taking the Seceda-Furnes-Ortisei cableways up to Seceda from Ortisei as described in this post, you'll approach the ridge from the other side: Val di Funes. It's a more challenging hike, but it's also a more interesting ascent route.

Important: There used to be an option to cross over the Odle/Geisler Group via the Forcella di Pana (Furcela Pana in Ladin, Panascharte in German). But, this route is still closed, due to a rockfall.

Resciesa – Furcela de Mesdi – Seceda Trail Description

Resciesa Funicular Mountain Station to Rifugio Brogles (1:20 hours)

Rifugio Brogles (Brogles Hütte)

From the Resciesa Funicular (Standseilbahn Raschötz, Funicolare Resciesa) mountain station follow signs to Rifugio Malga Brogles/Brogles Hütte, signed 1 hour 20 minutes.

In the morning, Sassolungo/Langkofel prominently rises above all else, emerging from a sea of clouds.

You'll cross the Resciesa Alp on a panoramic path in the direction of Val di Funes/Villnösstal. This path unfolds beautifully as you near the prominent Geisler Peaks. There are no significant ascents or descents.

Rifugio Brogles is located on an alpine pasture, surrounded by grazing cows. This is an ideal location for lunch. Service is on the slower side, but with those views, who cares.

Continue on trail 35 along the Adolf Munkel Trail for 2 kilometers.

After about 30 minutes, turn right onto trail 29 and ascend to Forcella de Mesdi (Furcela De Mesdi in Ladin, Mittagsscharte in German), 2597 m.

This mountain pass in the craggy heart of the Geisler Group links Val di Funes with Val Gardena.

It's a tough, continuous 710-meter ascent to the saddle, which lies between Sass Rigais and Gran Odle. Side note: the Val di Funes via ferrata entrance to Sass Rigais summit starts at Mittagsscharte.

The terrain is mostly loose scree and gravel. The path is occasionally marked with a red-painted dot.

At the saddle, views open up to the Puez Group, including the rounded summit of Col dala Pieres and the Forces de Sieles gully.

Forcella de Mesdi – Pieralongia – Forcella Pana (1:40 hours)

The descent follows a timber-bolstered path and zigzags down the mountain.

When you reach level ground, turn right in the direction of Piera Longia (aka Pieralongia), signed 30 minutes, and Seceda, signed 1:20 hours.

Hike through the pasture and follow trail 1 to Forcella Pana and Seceda.

Forcella Pana – Seceda – Seceda Mountain Station (30 minutes)

After passing the Pieralongia alpine pasture, continue to Forcella di Pana and the Seceda Ridgeline.

This perspective of the Fermeda peaks is breathtaking. Though it has been captured millions of times, it never gets old. Enjoy!

Most of you will head back down to Ortisei via the Seceda cableways. It's a 10-minute-walk from the Seceda peak to the Seceda Mountain Station (2453 m).

Seceda to Col Raiser Mountain Station (55 minutes)

Seceda to Col Raiser

For those continuing to Col Raiser gondola mountain station (2100 m), follow trail 2 for 3.1 km (370 m descending).

The descent is gentle as you wind through beautiful pastureland, taking in the views of mighty Sassolungo/Langkofel and Sella.

Trail Stats Resciesa - Seceda - Col Raiser

Starting Point: Resciesa Mountain Station (2122 m)

Ending Point: Col Raiser Mountain Station (2100 m)

Distance: 17.5 km point-to-point

Elevation Loss: 1099 meters

Difficulty: Difficult

Minimum Elevation: 1879 m

Maximum Elevation: 2597 m

Hey! I am planning on doing this hike. Do you know if it is still possible to hike here? I heard there are closed paths, but I do not now if this is the same route. Thank you.

Hi Adomas,

The Panascharte is still closed, I believe. You must hike across the Odle/Geisler Peaks via the Mittagscharte.

Hello,

First thing first, what a great blog this is! Thank you for all the valuable information.

I'm going to be in Dolomites this September and would like to do some hiking from the Seceda ridgeline. I quite like the sound of the described here trail from Resciesa, and am wondering whether it is feasible to add a detour to Refugio Odle from Rifugio Brogles? Many thanks!

Hi Kasia,

Thank you for reading our hiking blog!

It is feasible, but it will add a good 40 minutes to the hike and a few extra km. Rifugio Odle (Geisler Alm) is located just off of the Adolf Munkel Trail.

All the best,

Sabrina
